C. A. MITCHEL BREWERY HEAD, KILLED

Rob New Lenox P. O. Again

For the second time within a few weeks the New Lenox Drug Store and Postoffice was robbed last Thursday night. Friday morning when the clerk, James Stonehouse opened the door of the drug store he saw the place had been entered and when the proprietor and postmaster Ellis J. O'Daniel was called he discovered that the robbers had forced a safe in the post-office by drilling into the combination. The contents of the safe consisting of approximately $600 in cash, stamps, some Baby Government Bonds, 150 blank money orders and personal papers had been taken, also over $100 worth of cigarettes.

A type writer standing on a table near a window was tossed out in the yard.

Postal inspectors were notified and discovered many fingerprints of which photos were taken. No trace of the robbers has been found so far. It is presumed they must be well acquainted with the territory and from their work they appear to be professionals. But the old saying is "The government gets their men."

Nine Persons Hurt In 3 Car Crash

The junction of 159th st., and Wolf Road north of Mokena, known as "death corner" was the scene of another serious auto crash in which three cars were smashed and nine persons injured, one man quite critically. The accident occurred about 11 o'clock Sunday morning when an east bound car on 159th street crashed into an Indiana car trying to make a left hand turn onto Wolf road. The east bound car said to have been from Lockport was traveling at a high speed when it hit the Indiana car. This car was knocked against another car also from Indiana.

One of the injured men was given first aid in the lunch room of Fred Ingraham who called the Oak Forest ambulance and the injured were taken to the Oak Forest Infirmary.

New Lenox Fire District Goes Over 356 to 119

New Lenox township voters voted overwhelmingly in favor of the establishment of a fire district in that township at the special election held Tuesday. Casting their ballots in the two precincts of the township, the voters approved the measure by a tally of 356 to 119.

County Judge Glen L. Cowing is going to appoint three trustees to operate the fire protection district. Under the law, the trustees will be empowered to purchase fire fighting equipment and maintain it, with proper housing facilities to serve the entire township in the event of fire.

Because it is too late to levy taxes now for 1940, it is expected that the proposition of a bond issue to start the fire protection district may be submitted to the voters in the near future.

The vote Tuesday in precinct 1 was 155 for and 55 against the measure and in precinct 2, the tally was 201 for and 64 against.

Women's Clubs Meet At Frankfort

The regular Fall Tri-Annual meeting of the Will County League of Women's clubs was held Tuesday in the beautiful new auditorium of Frankfort Public school with the Frankfort club as hostess.

Over 200 guests were present. This was an especially outstanding event, the celebrating of the 25th Anniversary of this county organization. The first club organized was the Marley club in 1915.

The meeting was called to order at 10:30 a.m. by the County Pres., Mrs. Fred Blodgett of Homer. The program for the entire day was the observance of the anniversary which was carried out by a pageant, "In Days of Long Ago", written by Mrs. Ward Bush, formerly of Marley and now of Joliet. Mrs. Ed. Volbrath of Frankfort depicted a magician who came to the aid of the women with his wheel of magic and as she turned it backward, thereby time also various scenes were brought out.

Mrs. Thomas of Lockport was the narrator who assisted the magician with explanations. The first episode showed the first County Board meeting in 1915, followed by a scene depicting a tea party held 20 years ago.

In the morning also was a fashion show, the models being four little girls. Little Marilyn DeZee of Joliet, gave a reading entitled "When Grandma Danced the Minuet". The assembly sang, "Put on Your Old Gray Bonnet". A sumptuous dinner was served at noon in the dining hall of St. Peter's Evang. church, by the Ladies Aid.

The table where the officers were seated was beautifully set in dazling silver, the artistic work of Mrs. W. V. Hedges, Mrs. J. M. Clark and Mrs. Herbert Folkers poured.

The afternoon meeting was called to order at 2 o'clock at which time Mrs. R. L. Marshall of Joliet was presented who spoke briefly on the "Liquor Traffic Problem of Today". She showed that since we, the people of this country, which she said would include the club members present, "voted the return of the saloon", it is therefore, their responsibility for conditions as they are. The speaker drew attention to the large number of boys and girls who regularly attend taverns etc., for amusement. It is the duty of the women to make places for our boys and girls to attend so they need not have to seek their pleasure as they now do. Mrs. Marshall said because saloons were returned, in order to raise money in taxes for our government, it would be better for us to pay that amount ourselves and not have these questionable places.

The first episode of the afternoon depicted the first flower show where the stage was filled with flowers and the Judges deciding on the winners. The first Project Day held in the Baptist church in Joliet Feb. 8, 1935 showed a group of women busily engaged in making many articles, from flowers to reupholstering of furniture. In remembrance of the first time the women broadcasted, which was over station WCBS in Joliet, in 1939 another broadcast was portrayed, when the well-known woman columnist, Miss Dorothy Thompson taken by Mrs. Chas. Jensen of Lockport, introduced the presidents of each club who briefly told the accomplishments of their club. They were interviewed in order of their organizing: First, Marley, by Mrs. G. W. Bush; Manhattan, Mrs. Fred Sieffert; Plainfield, Mrs. John Birkett; Channahon, Mrs. Alfred Willard; Florence, Mrs. Jos. Marek; Frankfort, Mrs. Herbert Folkers; New Lenox, Mrs. A. D. Miller; Homer, Miss Myra Reed; Jackson, Mrs. Walter Schumacher; Joliet, Mrs. James Owen; Lockport, Sr., Wesley, Mrs. Phil Goodwin; Lockport Study Club, Mrs. John Little Janet Folkers of Frankfort wheeled in a large birthday cake lighted with 25 candles and which was presented by her mother, Mrs. Herbert Folkers to the President, Mrs. Blodgett who in turn presented it to Mrs. John Frazer, the first county president, and she in turn gave it to Mrs. Ward Bush the author of the day's program.

Will Nation Be In war By Xmas?

"Will this nation be in war by Christmas?" was the question posed today by Republican leaders as the election campaign nears its climax.

Speaking for Wendell L. Willkie, Republican candidate for president, and Charles L. McNary, his vice-presidential running mate, leaders declared:

"We can see the provocative acts of the present Roosevelt administration as leading only to war. "It seems to us a repetition of the old story of 1917, when our entrance into the World War followed by a short time the election of Woodrow Wilson, who campaigned on a platform that he had kept us out of conflict."

Voters were urged to preserve American peace by a Republican victory in the fall, which Willkie promised will bring full preparedness without the danger of conflict.

At the same time, the election of Dwight H. Green, Republican candidate for governor, was urged as the "only way in which representative government can be restored to Illinois, government which will remove the burden of excessive taxation and restore economy and sanity to the state administration."

Voters were urged to insure their right to vote quickly and with out challenge on Nov. 5 by registering at their own polling places on Oct. 15 or 29.

Speaking of registration, voters were warned not to confuse the election registration with the requirement that men of 21 to 35 will be forced to list themselves on Oct. 16 for the selective service draft.

"This brings home to every mother", it was declared, "the fact that their own boys are near the brink of war, that the present situation has been forced to a point where they must now offer a year of their lives training for the arts of war, away from their families and away from the pursuits on which they had pinned their life hopes."

Aged New Lenox Man Dies

Mr. Phillip Polleck, aged 92, father of Mrs. Robt. Hines of New Lenox passed away in Silver Cross hospital yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock.

New Pittsburgh-Harrisburg Turnpike Marks Beginning of Superhighway Era

By HERMAN CROCKETT

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)
HARRISBURG, PA. — Passenger automobiles speed along at 105 miles an hour. Their occupants, unaware of an excessive rate of motion, travel on a curveless ribbon of concrete that goes through mountains instead of over them—a highway without intersections or railroad crossings, without billboards or hazards of snow, ice, and fog.

A dream of the future? Hardly. Pennsylvania will dedicate such a highway and open it to public travel sometime this fall. It will be 160 miles long, connecting the city of Pittsburgh in the western part of the state with Harrisburg, the capital, near the east. And plans are being made to extend it an additional 112 miles to Philadelphia.

The road eliminates all the mountain hazards between the Ohio river and Delaware tidewater. It will reduce, by hours, travel from the Midwest to the eastern metropolises. For trucks it will save as much as 15 hours time and an estimated $30 between two points, compared to use of the present roads.

Since the beginning of the westward march of civilization across the United States, the formidable mountain ridges of the Appalachians have imposed natural barriers on travel and transportation between the Atlantic seaboard and the Middle West. Pennsylvania's two major east-west highways solved the problem in a limited way previously. The Lincoln highway crossed the mountains directly on steep grades; the other, the William Penn highway, followed the winding Juniata river to its headwaters, crossing one mountain and descending to Pittsburgh through rolling hill country. Both routes have obvious limitations, the former having many grades as steep as 8 and 9 per cent, and the William Penn having a few steep grades with many curves and a longer route between Philadelphia and Pittsburgh.

Always there has been the dream of a better and shorter road, one that would not add hundreds of miles to the journey by going around the mountains.

Follows Abandoned Railroad.
The new turnpike follows the line of the old South Penn railroad, a project never completed. It is a four-lane concrete shaft with east and west traffic separated by a 10-foot center parkway. Seven tunnels through the mountains, prepared for the railroad, are used to eliminate grades.

In all, there are seven miles of these tunnels. Every device to insure safety, comfort and speed has been installed. Huge fans will constantly supply an adequate amount of pure air. The tunnels will be electrically lighted.

On the open pike all crossroads are carried either underneath or overhead. Direct cross-flow is avoided by means of looping ramps, or cloverleaf intersections. All interchanges are so located that approaching traffic can look down on them and readily picture the layout. There will be no traffic lights. Deceleration and acceleration lanes are provided at each interchange. These are 1,200 feet long and are set parallel to and contiguous with the paving.

Carved out of the mountains as a single project, the road is not a merger of previous roads, linked together. It is all new. The severest grade anywhere is 3 per cent, that is three feet rise to 100 feet of length. Wherever curves have been necessary the road has been banked to accommodate high speeds. Test runs have shown a speed of 105 miles an hour as not dangerous. The superhighway cost $70,050,000 and was financed by a grant of $29,000,000 from the PWA and $41,050,000 in revenue bonds purchased by the RFC. Tolls are to be charged ($1.50 for passenger automobiles), but the highway will in time pay for itself and then become a free road, part of the state's highway system.

Seven tunnels permit the highway to pass through, rather than over or around, the Appalachian mountains, thereby eliminating one of the barriers that has confounded transcontinental traffic ever since the first western march of the pioneers.

The diagram above shows a cloverleaf intersection which enables vehicles to enter or leave the highway without disrupting the normal flow of traffic.

Built in Two Years.

Less than two years have been required to complete this ideal speedway, although previous attempts to span the mountains go back to the early 1800s. During that time more than a score of attempts were made. First surveys for a railroad were authorized by the Pennsylvania legislature in 1837, but it was not until 1854 that that body empowered a company to raise funds and charter the Marysville, Landisville and Broad Top railroad. In 1859, the name of the proposed railroad was changed by legislative enactment to the ambitious title, "Pennsylvania Pacific railroad," which was retained until 1863, when it was again changed to the "South Pennsylvania railroad," or "South Penn," as it was popularly called.

The project was revived and dropped several times during the next 20 years, but beyond keeping the charter alive, little was done until 1883 when William H. Vanderbilt took over the company. Then, in that roaring decade of the 1880s, when probably one-fifth of the nation's present railroad mileage was constructed, the old South Penn right-of-way, now followed by the turnpike, became the battleground of financial titans.

The greatest of all South Penn ventures began in New York in 1883, when the Pennsylvania railroad threatened to enter into competition with the New York Central by building a parallel line up the west shore of the Hudson river. In retaliation, William H. Vanderbilt, New York Central chief and one-time associate of J. P. Morgan, organized a company to build the South Penn road paralleling the Pennsylvania railroad's lines in its home state.

Carnegie a Backer.

The biggest backer was Andrew Carnegie, Pittsburgh steel king, who contributed $5,000,000. Carnegie welcomed the new line, for he had fought the "Pennsy" unsuccessfully for years to win lower rates for transporting his Pittsburgh steel to the seaboard.

"What do you think of it, Carnegie?" asked Vanderbilt.

"I think so well of it that I and my friends will raise $5,000,000 as our subscription," Carnegie replied.

"All right," said Vanderbilt. "I'll put in another $5,000,000."

Forty millions in stocks and bonds were floated, bought eagerly by the public. Vanderbilt organized the American Construction company, and then gave it the contracts. Surveys were resumed under the direction of Oliver W. Barnes, engineer, and a corps of 300 men. Ten-foot contour maps covering 1,000 square miles were drawn, and 5,000 miles of lines were run. In the fall of 1883, a definite line was adopted, and contracts for the tunnels and largest bridges were let.

Three thousand laborers poured into the mountains. Within two years, bridge piers for the line studied the Susquehanna river at Harrisburg; long cuts gashed the hillsides; mammoth fills scarred the valleys, and the towering peaks of the Alleghenies had been pierced by nine tunnels.

Then in the fall of 1885 when the job was half finished, the incredible order "stop work" went out. Engineers packed up their transits, laborers dropped their tools. The roadbeds, tunnels, and bridges were abandoned to the ravages of time.

Railroad Sold Out.

In financial circles behind the scenes, the death warrant of the South Pennsylvania railroad had been written. Alarmed by the prospect of a destructive railroad rate "war," J. P. Morgan forced Vanderbilt and his backers to sell out to the Pennsylvania railroad.

Following the World War, came troublous days for the railroads. America was taking to a new mode of travel. Automobiles were being turned out by the millions for a people who went pleasure-bent on trips that took them but hours where their forefathers had spent months. Also came great freight buses that carried the manufactured goods of the nation to the East over hard-surfaced roads. And the demand for better roads and more speed increased. In 1934, William A. Sutherland, then general manager of the Pennsylvania Motor Truck association, revived the idea of a road over the mountains; this time a highway instead of a railway.

For many months he carried the fight alone. But in 1935 a resolution to survey the possibilities of the proposal passed the legislature. Financing was a big problem, but the federal government finally looked upon the plan with favor, and assistance came from financial agencies set up by congress. The old South Penn line with its already-built tunnels was chosen.

Perhaps in the minds of the federal authorities was more than a road for industrial use; the road has definite military possibilities. In case of emergency it will be a major transportation artery. Men, munitions and other material could be moved across the Alleghenies with the speed so necessary to modern warfare. Just recently a motorized battalion of the Pennsylvania National Guard, in a test run across the still uncompleted road, left Harrisburg and set up a "defense area" near the important Bedford steel sector, 135 miles away, in just five hours. It was definitely a blitzkrieg movement, the fastest registered in any nation in any time.

Principally, however, the road is for scenic and commercial uses.

"Naturally, we shall exclude billboards," said Walter A. Jones, the turnpike commission chairman.

Asked how this policy would be enforced, he said, "First, we own a right-of-way 200 feet wide at the narrowest point. If, despite our disapproval, some enterprising company erects billboards, we shall plant on our own land such shrubs and trees as are necessary to hide the signs."

Even the oil stations will be under the supervision of the commission. A contract has been let to a leading company, but the 10 stations being erected are the property of the commission. Nine of the units will have one-story buildings. The tenth unit will feature a two-story building.

Women Swindlers Go After the Big Men, Survey Shows

Big-Time Financial Frauds Worked by So-Called Weaker Sex.

NEW YORK.—Are women more honest than men?

This timeworn topic of debate has had a new workout recently following a series of big-time financial swindles by business women, culminating in the arrest of Mrs. Mary B. Roberts, 51-year-old widow prominent in Scarsdale, N. Y., club and social circles, on a charge of forgery preferred by the son and heir of her employer, the late Samuel C. Thomson, noted mining engineer.

According to District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey, Mrs. Roberts admitted her peculations from her employer amounted to a half million dollars. A wizard at bookkeeping, she assertedly performed the remarkable feat of keeping her operations secret for 10 years. Thomson died in the belief that she was an ideal confidential secretary. But his son, Clifford, couldn't understand why his father's supposed $750,000 fortune had shrunk to $250,000, and investigated.

However, the case of Mrs. Roberts is far from being an isolated one. Some of the nation's biggest swindles, involving as victims numerous persons of national prominence, have been charged within the last few years to clever, but unscrupulous, business women.

Millions Taken.

Among them are Edna V. O'Brien, who, before she failed for a million dollars, swindled such notables as Anne Morgan and the late Amelia Earhart; Mrs. Margaret Robinson, who, as an investment counselor, nicked trustful investors for an estimated $250,000; Ida F. Craven, who sold hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of worthless mining stock; and Mrs. Lillian S. Schrein, who, by devious methods, got a half million dollars from Martin Beck, shrewd theater manager.

Another woman whose name is associated with the loss of a million is Mrs. Lydia B. Koch, recently indicted for fraud by the federal government after the courts had restrained her from selling securities in New York state.

Peculiarly, supposedly moneywise New York seems to be the happy hunting ground of the big-time women Ponzi. And the shrewdest financiers of the metropolis often appear in the lists of victims.

Study of Dishonesty.

An exhaustive study of the female Ponzi has been made, in the course of her duties, by Miss Bertha Schwartz, assistant attorney general of New York state. Confronted by the recent instances of big-scale feminine dishonesty, she has concluded that, while women are no less honest than men, they can't be regarded as essentially more honest.

When it comes to mathematics, the frail ladies apparently deal in astronomical numbers. There was Edna O'Brien, for instance. It was through Miss Schwartz' efforts that Edna, one-time leading investment counselor, was sent to prison in 1935. Such names as those of Anne Morgan, sister of J. P. Morgan, and the late Amelia Earhart, appeared among her victims.

Miss O'Brien, 48, was accused of having gotten away with $300,000 from Dr. Mary Dunne Walsh of New York city and $100,000 from the $1,000,000 estate of Dr. Walsh's mother, a Baltimore resident.

But that's not all. A bankruptcy schedule filed by Miss O'Brien listed $964,277 liabilities and $88,454 assets. The liabilities, according to Miss Schwartz, represented, for the most part, money stolen from victims in fake stock transactions. So Miss O'Brien's illicit business was just about in the million-dollar class.

Wins 75-Year Controversy Over Books Lost in War

WASHINGTON.—Ending a three-quarter century long controversy, the Beaufort, S. C., library won the right to replacement with duplicates of valuable books and documents captured by Federal soldiers in 1861, and later destroyed by fire.

President Roosevelt signed a measure directing the Library of Congress to transfer to the Beaufort library "books of the same value as those" taken by the United States armies when it defeated Confederate forces along the South Carolina coast.

The original Beaufort collection was taken to New York and advertised for sale, but New York newspapers protested and the advertisement was withdrawn. The books were placed in the Smithsonian institute here and destroyed by a fire in 1865.

Guardsmen Stumbles on Grave of Lost Relative

KINSTON, N. C.—National Guard Sergeant Charles W. Farmer told how, on a dark night, he stumbled over a grave on the Civil War battlefield at Vicksburg, Miss., where his outfit camped en route home from the Louisiana maneuvers.

The inscription on the tombstone: "Lieut. William Farmer, 81st Illinois Regiment"—Charles' great-uncle, who had not been heard from since the day he went to the war.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

Reviewed by CARTER FIELD

Campaign financing not along lines Senator Hatch had in mind . . . Regular Republican leaders fear amateurs will hurt Willkie.

(Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

WASHINGTON.—The real clash between the regular Republican organizations in so many states and the various independent groups is due not so much to authority in the direction of the campaign, though that is a sore point, as to the raising of money.

For example the regular Republicans in any given state will go to a man who has always given liberally, every campaign, for years. They will find that he has been approached by a solicitor for the Willkie clubs, or by some one connected with a Business Men's Willkie league, or a new club of Willkie Democrats, or any one of the dozens of names taken by these various organizations. He will tell them, regretfully, that he has already given all that he thinks he should. So the regular Republican cupboard is bare as far as his contribution is concerned.

All this has been magnified by the Hatch act. Lots of folks began to figure out ways to "get around it."

CHISELERS COLLECT FUNDS
In some instances, it seems, chiselers with no interest whatever in the Willkie campaign save as a means of making a bit of money, set up organizations which collected money and paid themselves fat salaries out of the treasuries of these newborn units.

Can you imagine how that would hit the regular Republican campaign fund?

All this comes, too, in a campaign where for the first time in history the regular state organizations are being required to finance a lot of normal campaign items themselves, or go without.

STATE ALLOTMENTS HIT

For example, because of the Hatch act limitation on national committee spending, it has been necessary to wield the axe on allotments to the states of all sorts of things, from literature to buttons. In the "good old days" these were furnished liberally by the national committee.

But the Hatch act prevents all that. So the present far from businesslike system is followed.

The Democrats are finding the same difficulty, but to a lesser degree, since they have an army of people in most communities to whom the job of keeping their party in power is their bread and butter. But even the Democrats are apparently working through various other than regular committees. For instance, literature is flooded out with a post office box number given as the return, and no other indication as to the source.

It's a far cry from what Sen. Carl A. Hatch intended!

G. O. P. HAS TROUBLE

Whether it has anything to do with the voting on election day or not, there is terrific organization trouble in the Wendell Willkie camp. Part of it is due to the Hatch act. Part of it is due to the intensive drive to organize the Democrats who happen to be for Willkie, and to do it independently of the regular Republican organizations in the various states. And part of it is due to the fact that what might be termed the regular Republican leaders are not having much luck in getting their advice taken with respect to how the campaign should be run, and, even more important, as to what should be done and said by Mr. Willkie himself.

It may be that all the mad scrambling, the furious energy, the inept but enthusiastic work on the part of amateurs, will actually result in more votes for Willkie than would have been the case if the campaign had been run in an orthodox manner. The regular politicians do not think so. The amateurs do.

AMATEUR MAY SURPRISE

There are certain spots in the country where most political reporters think the amateurs may surprise everybody by their success. For example, in communities, particularly in the big cities, where the regular Republican organizations are actually more adjuncts of the Democratic machines than they are a real fighting opposition to the machines.

The amateurs are not worried about the party at all. They are interested in a particular candidate or a particular issue. In this campaign most of the amateurs on Willkie's side are interested only in electing Willkie President. Most of them would not give a whoop about the Republican nominee for vice president, Charles L. McNary, if it were possible to discriminate. Not that they are against McNary, or against the Republican nominees for senator, governor or county commissioners where they are working. They simply do not care. They are out to elect Willkie and nothing else bothers them.

Early Removal Of Tonsils May Affect Sinuses

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

WHEN it was found some 30 years ago that infected tonsils caused rheumatism and rheumatism caused heart disease, there were thousands of children who had their tonsils removed if they had one attack of simple sore throat. Also, tonsils that were larger than normal, without any symptoms whatever, were removed.

However, that the tonsils are useful organs up to the age of puberty (14 to 16) is admitted, so that physicians today do not advise removal of tonsils unless there are repeated attacks of tonsillitis. If one or more attacks of tonsillitis are followed by rheumatic attacks a few weeks later, the removal of the tonsils is usually advised.

There has arisen in recent years a new problem of sinus infection, sinusitis as it is called. And physicians are telling us that there is more sinus infection now because of the early removal of tonsils which were doing some of the work done by the sinuses. The increase in the amount of work to be done by the sinuses—filtering blood and air—preventing nose, throat and chest ailments, is increasing the number of cases of sinusitis.

An examination of school children with and without tonsils by Dr. Kayser, Rochester, N. Y., who has done so much research work on tonsils, found that sinus infection occurred more often in those whose tonsils had been removed during their early years.

Allergy Sometimes the Cause.

That sinus trouble is not always due to infection is pointed out by Dr. E. C. Mitchell, Memphis, Tenn., in West Virginia Medical Journal, who states that allergy (sensitivity to various substances) can set up an irritation in a sinus which the patient, and sometimes the physician, may believe due to infection. He points out that if allergy or sensitiveness is causing the disturbance in the sinus, the material dropping into the throat is liquid or fluid and the lining of sinus and nose is pale, whereas in infection of the sinus, the material is a thick mucous and the lining of sinus and back of nose is red and boggy.

Relief for the 'Hard of Hearing'

MOST physicians dislike recommending new remedies or forms of treatment to those who are hard of hearing because they do not wish to raise false hopes in these patients. The hard of hearing patient, because he misses so much of what is going on around him, gradually grows moody, keeps looking inward instead of outward, and to have his hopes raised only to be dashed down, increase his mental depression.

The use of prostigmin—an ovary extract—has given some help in cases of hard of hearing due to catarrh.

From the Ear, Eye, Nose and Throat Monthly, comes the report of another series of cases of "partial" deafness in which prostigmin was used.

Twenty-eight patients with head noises and acute or recent blockage of the eustachian tube (tube carrying air from back of throat to inner side of ear drum), most of whom had marked deafness, were given injections of 1 cubic centimeter of prostigmin methyl-sulphate, 1 to 2,000 solution, at intervals of from three to five days, together with the opening up of the eustachian tube by the use of an instrument and massage. There was rapid relief from the annoying symptoms and few patients required more than five injections even where there had been loss of hearing for as long as one month.

Thirtythree chronic cases of deafness were treated by similar injections two to three times weekly, with resulting gradual improvement or very slow improvement.

Remember, prostigmin is a gland product and should be given by, or only under the direction of a physician.

QUESTION BOX

Q.—What does the word "negative" denote when applied to a blood test? Would a blood test show infection present due to bad tonsils, teeth, etc.? What causes dizziness due to weather changes?

A.—Usual blood test where word "negative" is used means test for syphilis and that individual does not have syphilis. This test will not show that blood is free of poison from teeth, tonsils, etc.

Educator Discovers Vocation Guidance Slighted by Schools

NEW YORK.—Only 6 per cent of the 23,032 public high schools in the United States provide educational counselors or vocational guidance officers on full time or more than half time, according to a recent study by Clarence E. Lovejoy of Columbia university. For every 3,100 high school pupils in this country, there is only one faculty adviser, he says.

"Parents should howl vocally and write letters to their local newspapers if they live in cities which are lax in providing vocational guidance and educational counseling. If the school board has not appropriated funds for these activities, or if the school superintendents or principals are not supplying them to the tax-paying residents, it is time to bring pressure."

"High school boys and girls need advice as well as information in selecting their colleges," Mr. Lovejoy declares. "They look to their principals and teachers for this guidance. Most high schools either shirk giving advice, or they give bad advice, which is worse than none at all. Educational counseling, whether in high schools or colleges, means talking with students and parents, planning students' programs, approving or advising changes, examining unsatisfactory progress, discussing fields of specialization."

Child Accident Rate Increases in October

CHICAGO.—October and May are high frequency months for accidents among elementary and high school students, the National Safety Council reports in its statistical yearbook for 1940. The report shows kindergarten to be the safest grade, with only six accidents per 100,000 student-days resulting in absence from school for one-half day or more or requiring medical attention.

Madam shook Lynn gently and laughed: "You ask how you're going on. I'll tell you. The first thing you're going to come to work. Nothing like work. Besides, you need the money, and I'll dock you if you aren't on the job! Next, you're going to have a lot of new clothes. Nothing like a smart new hat for a woman whose heart's broken! That's why I make money. Half the women who come in to my shop on a clothes spree have broken hearts. Don't you realize that? You haven't a corner on all the suffering in the world!" That idea had apparently not occurred to Lynn.

"Now, I'm going to see you into bed. I'll turn off the lights. And tomorrow night I'm going to take you home with me for the weekend. By Monday you'll be a different person."

Madam was as good as her word. Saturday night she came for Lynn and the girl went with Madam to her handsome uptown apartment.

When they had finished dinner, Madam began to talk about style.

"You should begin to study yourself, Lynn. Learn by trial and error what you should wear. You've been letting me dress you. You'd be lovelier if you'd evolve your own clothes. You've been too busy being in love to do anything but walk around in a daze. It's time you got to work. Then there's another thing. If Rene goes away, what about you?"

"I have my work."

"You don't want to work in my shop for $30 a week all your life. You've got a career ahead of you."

Madam looked thoughtfully at the girl: "I've had a couple of boys into the shop to see about you for color photography. You'd model well that way. I'd dress you, and it would not be bad for me, you know." Madam had an eye to the main chance.

"I couldn't pose for anybody but Rene, somehow!"

"Nonsense! You can face a color camera, can't you?" Madam smiled: "Your coloring is unusual, you know."

The next night Lynn took a bus down to the Square and walked over to Rene's studio.

"I hoped you'd come, I'm hungry." He grinned at her. "When do we eat?"

Rene's old cry! Lynn smiled in spite of herself, and she set about making supper. Then, seated across from Rene, she felt almost happy again.

Marty dropped in, seemed unaware that anything was wrong. But then, Marty was always tactful, Lynn mused.

"Well, the famous artist will be off for Paris and Rome before long," Marty remarked. "Lord I hate to see you go, Rene!" Rene nodded.

"Think of me!" Lynn demanded. "I am," Marty squinted up at Lynn as she gave him a cup of coffee.

"Half the boys in town are screaming for you, Lynn. What do you say to that, Rene?"

Rene shrugged: "They show good taste!"

"You're the ideal model, Lynn."

"That's what Mme. Reanoud said. She wants me to do some photographic modeling."

"Common trade, eh?" Marty laughed. "Might be a good idea. I think you've been in that dress shop long enough. And if you wanted to pose for some of the illustrators you would have time."

"I wish you'd talk to Mme. Reanoud for me, Marty."

"I'll do what I can. You should have a good agent, Lynn. I haven't time to give you the thought I should, but I've promised Rene I'd keep an eye on you."

Lynn flashed Rene one of her lovely smiles. He had been very loyal to her.

"The first thing I want to do is move," Lynn said. "The thought of that apartment is too painful."

"That's not a bad idea," Rene turned to Lynn. "Take what you want of this stuff in here. It doesn't amount to much. There might be a small apartment in this building. Better ask tomorrow. It would be easier coming here."

Marty left early and Rene asked Lynn to stay while he smoked another cigarette.

"Now I'm going; I rather dread the break," Rene remarked.

"Think of me! Rene, what will I do without you?" Lynn turned to him in genuine distress.

He came over to her chair and took her hand. "Look at me, Lynn." Her wide set brown eyes which he had painted with such power looked up inquiringly.

"I love you, Lynn. I have for a long time. I couldn't speak, knowing how you felt about Wild. But now it's different. Come with me! I'll do my best to make you happy." Lynn gave a protesting little gesture.

"Don't answer me tonight, Lynn. Think about it. I won't ask for your love. Maybe some day you'll feel different. I think you care about me as much as you do anybody in this world. That will be enough for me. I won't ask for more."

He paced restlessly up and down the room as he pleaded: "I'm going places. I know that now. I feel the power in me! I couldn't have done anything without you."

He came over to her again. "I mean you so, darling!"

CHAPTER XXVII

Lynn's hands were in Rene's. He clung to her. In her desperate loneliness she was tempted. Could she find a kind of happiness with Rene? Helping him to paint his fine pictures? It would mean a wonderful life, Europe, all the strange places of the world. For Lynn knew, too, that Rene had a great future before him. It would be wonderful to have a part in that career.

His arms were about her, as he pleaded his case: "We'll find a place down in Capri, and I'll work like mad, Lynn!" Rene's eyes were burning, his lips were on hers.

"Rene, I can't!" Lynn clung to his arm, appealingly as she spoke. "I can't, Rene. It's too late." He let her go then, and the suffering on his face accused her. Why make him unhappy? There was no peace for herself. Why not at least try to make him happy? But even as she argued with herself, she tried to make him understand: "You wouldn't be happy, Rene, knowing I loved somebody else. You're too fine a person for half measures!"

Rene could not agree. "I'm willing to take the risk, Lynn!" He held her hand that wore Wild's emerald. "Please think it over!"

She left him then to go back to her apartment. There she wondered whether she was right. Her ring hung heavy on her hand. She slipped it off. That was the first thing she must do. Even Lynn had not realized the value of the gorgeous stone. She put it back in its box, wrapped it carefully, and in a sure hand addressed it to Raymond Austin, Austin Manor.

Lynn felt almost happy again.

Later that week she found a small studio apartment in Rene's building, and it was arranged that the few things he had would be moved there.

The days hurried by. Marty had found an agent to handle her affairs and there was talk of a contract with a cigarette company for color photographs.

Rene's belongings were packed in his new luggage.

"I'm still hoping you'll change your mind, Lynn," Rene said one evening, just forty-eight hours before his sailing.

"Even if you don't come now, you could come over later if you change your mind."

"You're a darling, Rene. I wish I could."

But both of them were sure her answer was final.

The day Rene was to leave, Lynn got the morning off from the shop. She cooked Rene's last breakfast in her new apartment, and a lot of people dropped in to say good-by.

Marty was there, of course. He was going to the boat, and so were several of Rene's artist friends. Lynn was glad there was a lot of excitement, and even at that early hour, Marty was lading out the highballs with gusto.

There was little time for Rene and Lynn to talk. But he did manage to corner her in the kitchenette for a moment.

"I'm leaving some money in a savings account for you, Lynn," he said as he handed her a bank book. "It isn't much. But I want you to have it. You know how I feel. If the time ever comes you want your freedom, take that money and get it. That's what it's for."

Lynn looked at the book in her hand. "I can't take it, Rene."

"You have, already. It's in your name now. I asked you to come. That always stands. But I want you to know your freedom is there when you want it." He paused a moment: "I messed up your life once, Lynn. I don't want to do it again!"

He kissed her hand. "Remember, next time, tell the truth, or if you fall in love, get your freedom first."

"I'll never fall in love again, Rene. That's over."

"You will, but I still have hopes it might be me."

She smiled at him through her tears. "I wish it would be!"

"That's the sweetest thing you could say to me!"

"If you meet somebody, Rene..." But he would not let her finish. He leaned over and kissed her on the lips and then let her go.

The sailing party was gay and some fifteen men and girls piled into Rene's cabin.

Lynn wiped her eyes and the crowd insisted on taking her to luncheon with them. Marty was at his best and kept everybody laughing. Lynn was grateful to him, for she knew he understood. Later he offered to drop her at Mme. Reanoud's.

In the taxi he gave her hand a pat: "Well, kid, a new deal. You're going to get some good cards now. Nothing can stop a girl with your looks. I'll drop in and see you now and then. How about supper tonight?"

Lynn knew why he asked, knew he realized how she dreaded that first evening alone with Rene gone, too.

"I'd be grateful," she said simply. "Maybe I'll have good news for you." Then she left him.

She worked hard all afternoon to make up for her morning off, and she was grateful to think that Marty would be waiting for her that night. He had been a staunch friend.

He was there when she finished the day's work at 6 o'clock, and he came into the shop to talk with Mme. Reanoud.

"It's all set, Madam, the boys will see you about the arrangement for clothes."

"Can I have Lynn for my Spring fashion show?" Madam demanded. "Be sure it's understood in the contract, you'd better cast your eye over it."

Later, Marty and Lynn dined in a comfortable German restaurant over Third avenue. They sat long over their late dinner.

"You hate to go home, don't you?"

"Yes."

"Let me give you some advice. Keep going places. Then, after a while, you won't notice it when you come home to the studio. We're creatures of habit, and if you keep plugging, after a while things don't seem so important."

"If I could just forget for a while, go to sleep and wake up in about two years!"

CHAPTER XXVIII

Lynn's lovely face, in colors, smiled out from the back of the magazines these days.

Rene, in Rome, saw the first color photographs and cabled his congratulations. When that cable was delivered to her Lynn hardly had strength to open it. For that hope sprang always—that Wild might relent.

It was a gorgeous Autumn day. Lynn, by force of habit, turned straight to the society columns. That was the only word she had now-days of Wild. And that was so little. She knew when Mrs. Austin left or returned from her Palm Beach home. She knew when Chuck joined his brother in Algiers in the early Spring and when he returned. It was there she learned Wild was on a trip around the world. And there was a great bitterness in her heart as she read.

"I must stay and face the music. He can go wherever he chooses—forget!"

There had been a photograph of Wild big-game hunting in India, entertained by a maharajah. She pushed the paper from her. No news today.

Rene had been faithful. His letters were a bright spot in her life. He did not write often, but when he did he gave her a delightful picture of his life in Rome. He was working like mad, painting wildly. And always the same plea: "Come."

Often for hours she'd forget about Wild. Then suddenly she'd find herself sitting in a restaurant where they had dined, and it was all she could do to keep from running out of the place. Or she would pass a book shop where they'd lingered on a lazy afternoon.

It was later than she thought when she got home that day and she hurried into the building. In her studio she found a letter from Rene.

She undressed leisurely and then slipped into bed. Now. She slit the envelope. Out fell some snapshots. They were Rene and a pretty brunette girl. "My new model." That was the way one of the pictures was labeled.

He had been vacationing up in the mountains. That is why he had not written. He had been ill. A cold again and the doctors had ordered him away. That's where he'd found his new model.

"I'll always miss you, Lynn," he said as she read on. "But life must go on. I'm glad the work is going well for you. Your pictures I see every place where they sell American magazines. It is exciting getting the new ones. But they're so expensive over here that I don't buy them. I permit myself the luxury of stopping at the newsstands and looking at your face."

The next few paragraphs left Lynn white-faced. "You remember what I said once. If I ever wanted my freedom, I'd tell you. I think it is better that you settle things once and for all. I say this after thinking about the matter for a long time. Go and see an attorney, Lynn. Try Mortimer. You know him. Tell him the story. He'll advise you. I wish you'd do this right away." The letter dropped from Lynn's hand.

Queer that she should feel so badly. He was in love with the model. Lynn scolded herself. After all, she had her chance. She had let him go. Now she must give him the freedom that he asked.

THE BOYHOOD OF JESUS

LESSON TEXT—Luke 2:40-52.
GOLDEN TEXT—And Jesus increased in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man.—Luke 2:52.

One brief but revealing glimpse into the earthly life of our Lord is all we have from His birth to the time when he entered upon His public ministry at His baptism in the Jordan. How appropriate it is that he was permitted to live those years of His life behind the curtain of divine silence.

The incident in our lesson shows Jesus at the age of responsibility, and in His Father's house. This is preceded by one verse which reveals Him as the growing child, and is followed by another verse which tells of His advancement from boyhood into manhood. Luke, who is the only one who presents this story, thus fills out the picture of the divine-human personality of the One whom he purposes to reveal as the perfect and universal Saviour.

I. The Child Grows (v. 40).

Like every other child in the world (apart, of course, from any sin or blemish), Jesus grew during the first 12 years of His life on earth. One rightly regards that growth as the normal, happy development of every child, a time of physical development, or carefree play, of learning obedience in the household at Nazareth. A child should not bear the burdens of life nor be required to make its weighty decisions.

Jesus came into the world to die as the Saviour of sinful men, but for these childhood years we are glad that He just grew, waxed strong in body as well as in spirit, developing mentally, and that in it all "the grace of God was upon him." May our children have a similar opportunity and privilege!

II. The Boy Meets Life's Responsibilities (vv. 41-51).

Soon enough came the day when as a "son of the law" Jesus reached the age of accountability and went with His parents to keep the feast of the Passover. He entered the temple, and there took over the responsibility for his own religious life, which until then had been borne by His parents. Such a day is of vital importance in the life of every boy and girl, and in the case of Jesus was of special significance.

Acting for Himself, He tarried in the temple. As a good learner, He asked and answered questions, at the same time amazing those who heard by His understanding. There His mother (who had shown her confidence that He was to be trusted to be where He ought to be) found Him after she had looked in vain for Him at eventide in their company on the road.

To Him it was the natural and expected thing that He would be in His Father's house, going about the business of God. He recognized the special relationship between Himself and the Father—His very own Father—and He began to assume the responsibility of His divine mission on earth.

He was about to turn the corner from boyhood and start toward manhood, but there were yet 18 years that He was to show His perfect submission to the will of God by His obedience to His parents. There is a real lesson there for every growing boy and girl.

III. The Youth Goes On to Manhood (v. 52).

The curtain is drawn again, and the boy Jesus develops into the man; yes, the man who was to bear on Calvary's tree your sins and mine. What do we know about these years when a boy with the consciousness that He must be about His Father's business went forward to manhood under the loving and watchful eye of the mother who "kept all these sayings in her heart" (v. 51)? Only what Luke tells us, but that is a great deal.

Jesus "advanced," the word being entirely different in meaning from the "grew" of verse 40. The child grows without any thought or purpose of doing so, but the boy pressing on to manhood has to beat his way forward, cutting a path through life to his goal.

The fact that Jesus did that should encourage every young man and woman who is doing the same in a difficult and hostile world, and cause them to seek the daily companionship and help of the Son of God and Son of Man who has passed that way before them.

The development here puts the mental first, then the physical. The latter is important, but must be under control of the former. Crowning them both is His growth in grace, fellowship with God and fellowship with men, the latter glorified and made useful by the former.

Here again we may learn of Him who, though the Son of God with power, was obedient to the limitations of the humanity He had taken, and yet advanced "in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man" (v. 52).

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

I use 3/4-inch wide gummed tape. Pieces 2 1/2-inches long are folded in half. The fold end is stuck together and punched. These tabs are placed on the rings of the binder and booklet stuck between the open ends. We are inveterate booklet collectors on all sort of subjects. Frequently we cover binders with fabrics or interesting papers so they look attractive on the shelves in any room.

NOTE: Here is a good suggestion for keeping the series of sewing booklets which Mrs. Spears has prepared for our readers. There are five booklets available and a new one is published every other month. No. 5 contains directions for 30 different homemaking ideas, including new fall curtains; useful holiday gifts, and description of the other booklets in the series. When you write for your copy of Book 5 be sure to enclose 10c to cover cost and mailing. Send order to:

AROUND the HOUSE Items of Interest to the Housewife

When sweeping a room open all the windows and sweep toward the center of the room. This prevents the dust from settling on the woodwork and the walls.

Rickrack braid makes a gay finish for bedroom, kitchen, bathroom or play room curtains. It's equally effective on plain, figured or colored materials—such as unbleached muslin, chintz, dimity or lawn.

When painting a room the following hints may be found useful: Don't be in a hurry to finish; put down old newspapers, before work and remove all curtains and hangings; keep handy a rag soaked in turpentine to wipe off "mistakes."

Witch grass, which is the bane of many garden makers, can be wholly eradicated by the simple process of cultivating with a wheel hoe, or, for that matter, any hoe, twice a week. Once a week will not be sufficient, but once every three or four days will certainly kill it out. All weeds can be dealt with more effectually now than earlier in the season, for much of their vitality has been expended.

To make peanut butter spread easily, add a little boiling water, and then a speck of salt for better flavor. Mix until creamy with a fork. Add some chopped raisins to peanut butter and use as filling for Graham bread sandwiches for the children's lunches.

At least once a year take down shades, stretch them out on a flat surface and after dusting them thoroughly go over them with a wet (not dripping) cloth rubbed lightly with white soap. Clean a portion of the shade at a time, rinsing off the soap with a cloth squeezed out of clear water. Dry thoroughly.

For Best Results—After putting water and soap into washing machine, let it run for a minute or two to dissolve soap before putting in clothes.

Let the dirt around a potted plant come within half an inch of the top of the pot. Then fill the pot with water every day for the average house plant. If you have unusual plants ask your florist about the amount of water they need.

Mrs. Babcock reports a very promising outlook for the election of Wendell L. Wilkie and his Republican running mate on Nov. 5th which of course was more than gratifying to her.

It is very interesting to see the Jeffersonian Democrats working with all their might to defeat the "New Deal."

The second object of the trip was to see the south in the fall and it was beautiful, words cannot paint the picture of nature and beauty. Mrs. Babcock has been asked to speak at a Republican rally Oct. 25 at Sullivan, Indiana which she has promised to do.

THE ODAKO CAMP FIRE GIRLS

The Odako Camp Fire Girls met at their Guardian's home on Thursday after school. After a song "Wohelo" and the flag salute, they held a business meeting. Mrs. Eileen Hunter, field worker, was present and gave the Guardian of the girls much praise for work they had so far accomplished. Marie Eickelberg was taken in as a new member. Then after the business was finished, the girls sang several songs and had a short play time. Then Mrs. Hunter talked to the group and gave them many new ideas and also asked them questions on the work they have done and said they are doing fine work.

Sunday, Mrs. Alice Smith, Guardian and Miss Lorraine Speelman, assistant, came out to visit and get acquainted with the Odako group who met them at the 12:09 noon train and they all went to the Tinley Creek Grove for a picnic. The Chicago group put on the candle lighting service, which was much enjoyed by all. It gave the Tinley girls much enjoyment and thrill. The work is very solemn and is to be compared to a religious service.

The Tinley group wish to thank Mr. Eickelberg, Mrs. Boom, Mrs. Bartholemew, Mr. Cupp, Mr. Johnson who so generously furnished their cars to take the girls to the Tinley Creek Woods and back again.

Mrs. Margaret Alexander also brought her group out. She is a guardian. Both groups are sponsored by a Methodist church near 71st Street in Chicago. There were 20 girls from Chicago in the two groups. It gives the Guardian very much encouragement and pleasure to see the interest the parents are showing in the group.

Mrs. Bartholemew, Mrs. Cupp, Mrs. Tolan and Mrs. Oulman attended the group meeting at 208 North Wabash Ave., this meeting being held once a month for Guardians and parents. It was a very interesting and instructive meeting.

Loughran Hits Burke On Slot Machine Racket

Last Monday night over the radio, Mr. Loughran asked Mr. Burke why he did not keep his promise of four years ago when he said he would rid the county of all slot machines. Loughran then cited that Mr. Burke had over three months in which to act because he was not enjoined by any juncton prohibiting him from doing his duty.

IDLE PROMISES

Mr. Loughran asked Mr. Burke what he meant by a political add he had four years ago stating that he (Mr. Burke) would give results, not idle promises to the voters in consideration for their support. Were you sincere when you made that promise Mr. Burke or was it just devised to get votes.

Mr. Loughran speaks over the Joliet radio station WCLS every Monday and Thursday night at 6:45 P.M. He asks everyone who is interested in good government to tune in and hear the facts of this campaign.

On Thursday, April 4th, 1940 There Appeared in The Joliet Herald News an Advertisement that read as follows:

THIS IS HIS RECORD NO. 4

He has driven out Slot Machines and the Recketeering Syndicates under which they flourished. Will County, under His Vigorous, Honest Administration, has seen the end of the Threat of the One-Arm Bandit. Nominate James E. Burke.

NOW READ THE TRUTH

Here is an article that appeared in a Joliet Newspaper under date of November 5th, 1936, showing that Mr. Burke was free to act, to oust the Slot Machines, the day he took his oath of office. Quote. "We want Mr. Burke to be a good states attorney. So when he goes into office on the first Monday in December, there will be no injunction restraining him from interfering with or removing the slot machines owned by The Crown Supply Company. That injunction applies only to the present States Attorney (meaning Mr. McCabe) and other officials, to be effective, some Judge must enter a new order and a new injunction restraining Mr. Burke from doing so." (End of Quote.)

You can see from the above article that Mr. Burke had over three months in which to get rid of the slot machines but for some reason of his own he failed to do so, we now ask Mr. Burke why he did not do his duty. After reading the truth what do you think of Burke's Record No. 4.

Hear Francis J. Loughran discuss the real facts, of this campaign over W. C. L. S. every Monday and Thursday night.

Killing Steer Prices Holding Higher

Killing steer prices consistently are holding higher than a year ago, the prevailing average cost being close to $2 per cwt. better. Hogs, however, are 40c lower than a year earlier, sharply increased receipts affecting the market. Lambs show little change. The National Defense program and the drop in imports are aiding the markets.

More than 75,000,000 pounds of meat are purchased annually for the regular standing army, each enlisted man being allowed 18 oz. of meat per day. The conscription of 400,000 men by January 1 will boost the aforementioned tonnage bought on military account.

Imports of meat have shrunk to a trickle. Last month's foreign shores were 20 per cent less incoming beef shipments from than a year earlier, while only a half-million pounds of pork arrived compared with 4 1/2 million, a year ago, while pork and lard decreased sharply.

Stocker and feeder cattle buyers attracted by the recent 50 to 75c decline in prices, are now more active purchasers, resulting in fully 25c of the loss being recovered by sellers. Selections still are good and likely will continue so until early November, after which only dribbling shipments of rangers will arrive. Demand for feeder lambs continues strong. Nothing scaling under 65 lbs. is arriving.

NO THIRD TERM FOR PRESIDENT

This is OUR Country!

"This government and this way of life of ours is the most precious thing in all the world. If I can but play a small part in the discussion that will lead to its preservation, I shall be content. And I turn to that vast, mistaken, deluded government of ours in Washington, and I say to them, give our country back to us. It belongs to us. We want it. We love it. We are not cynical about it. We would like very much to share the burden of it amongst ourselves. We would like, if necessary, to suffer for it, so that we may pass it on intact to other generations."

"WE ARE SIMPLY DELIGHTED WITH OUR FALL AND SPRING GAS HOUSE-HEATER."

Hundreds of families praise the

NEW AUTOMATIC GAS HOUSE-HEATER

No WONDER users are so enthusiastic about the new Automatic Gas House-Heater! It does away with bothersome fire-building during changeable Fall and Spring weather, gives automatic heat for as long or short a period as you wish, and doesn't interfere with regular Winter furnace use.

All you do is place the heater into the door of your hot air furnace or hot water boiler, set the automatic thermostat control, and enjoy real comfort. There's nothing to watch... nothing to worry about. And it's economical, too, because of the special low gas-heating rate and because the Automatic Gas House-Heater works only when necessary—there's no waste of fuel.

Why not place your order now for this new, portable heater and be ready for the next cold day?

Foundations have been completed for two new buildings in the Collins subdivision in the east end of the village.

While Earl Reish was driving on the Southwest Highway near Harlem, an approaching car collided with him. Mr. Reish suffered a broken nose and a deep cut on the lip which required two stitches to close. His car was badly damaged and was towed to the Oelke Bros., garage in Orland.

The Orland Methodist church held their annual bazaar and supper on Wednesday night. The affair was largely attended and was a big success.

CARD OF THANKS

I wish to thank our Orland Park friends for the kindness and sympathy extended to me in the loss of my father, also for floral offerings.

MRS. S. S. KNOX

A large number of Orland people attended the funeral of Mrs. Edw. Roemer held last Thursday afternoon in the St. John Evangelical church in Mokena.

During the heavy wind and rain storm Orland was without electricity for several hours.

Are We Getting Soft?

By Holgar J. Johnson
President Institute of Life Insur.

The enemies of democracy are saying that we are going soft. I challenge the fact.

Perhaps we are riding when we ought to walk. Maybe we are sitting in the stands when we ought to be playing in the game. That does not prove that we are soft, however. In the last war, our boys proved they could hold their own in endurance with anybody.

Our critics say things are too easy for us industrially—that we have far more than our share of raw materials were never used unplaces on the world map where raw materials were never used until Americans came in and started things humming.

A high standard of living does not necessarily mean softness, as long as we realize that this standard depends on an honest day's work. I believe that most people who count recognize this and live up to it.

To me a real proof of the toughness of our moral fiber is our willingness to sacrifice some of today's luxury and pleasure to gain tomorrow's security for our families and ourselves. A nation where 64 million people carry life insurance for this purpose certainly hasn't gone soft.

And I have a deep-seated conviction that anyone who tries to take away from the rank and file of America its hard-earned standards of living and its hard-won security, will find he has caught a Tartar.

LET'S SWING INTO FALL
(See Recipes Below)

Three cheers! It's fall again! Now is the time to perk up your home a bit, to scan through Dame Fashion's news notes, and to dress up your table a bit with new and old-time favorites.

As each season comes we always heed its call by planning foods suitable for serving at that particular time of the year. We try to rush spring by setting forth very crisp, cool, and fresh vegetable salads. Throughout the summer, when appetites wane, cooling beverages and light foods are most popular.

But with cooler weather that is here at last, appetites pick up, and the family is more than ready to discard their favorite lighter meals for something more substantial that will provide new energy for school and fall activities.

Many of the foods we serve are those that your mother served, and her mother before that time, but we can give new flavor to them, new and attractive ways of serving, and a 1940 style.

A tiny sprinkling of ginger over roast beef gives it a yummy flavor. Meat loaf may be baked in a ring mold and served with parsley potato balls in the center.

Pour a bottle of gingerale over ham for baking, and baste occasionally.

When using jelly or jam as a filling for layer cake, spread each layer very thinly with soft or creamed butter first. This keeps the jelly or jam from soaking into the cake.

If you add a few drops of mint extract to whipped cream it makes a delicious topping for chocolate cake.

Apple Pie.

½ cup shortening
½ cup boiling water
¼ cups flour
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon baking powder
4 to 5 tart apples (peeled and sliced)
½ cup sugar
Dash cinnamon or nutmeg

Place shortening in a warm bowl, pour boiling water over it and cream thoroughly with a fork. Place flour, salt and baking powder in flour sieve and sift gradually into the creamed shortening and water mixture. Mix thoroughly. Make up into a dough ball and chill.

To make apple pie, divide pastry, roll out and line pie plate with first half. Peel and slice the apples, arrange in alternate layers with sugar and cinnamon, or nutmeg. Top with pastry and bake in a hot oven (450 degrees) for 10 minutes; then reduce oven heat to 350 degrees and bake approximately 35 minutes longer. Serve warm with a wedge of cheese.

Golden Carrot Ring.

(Serves 5-6)
1 tablespoon onion (minced)
3 tablespoons butter
1 cup soft bread crumbs
2 eggs (well beaten)
1½ cups milk
2 cups raw carrots (grated)
1 teaspoon salt
Dash pepper

Brown the onion in the butter. Remove from fire, and add crumbs. Place in a mixing bowl, and add well-beaten eggs. Mix well. Add milk, carrots, salt and pepper. Pour into well greased ring mold and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for about 40 minutes. Turn onto heated platter and serve immediately.

Stuffed Ham Steak.

(Serves 5-6)
2 cups soft bread crumbs
½ cup seeded raisins (chopped)
¼ cup walnut meats (broken)
¼ cup brown sugar
1½ teaspoon dry mustard
¼ cup butter (melted)
2 large slices smoked ham (½ inch thick)
Whole cloves

Combine the crumbs, raisins, nuts, sugar, mustard, and butter to form a dressing. Place one slice of ham in a shallow baking pan, and spread dressing on the ham. Place a second slice of ham on top. Stick whole cloves into the fat. Bake in a slow oven (300 degrees) for about 1 hour.

Dutch Cream Cookies.

(Makes 4 dozen)
½ cup butter
½ cup sugar
1 egg
¼ cup sour cream
¼ teaspoon soda
3 cups flour
1 teaspoon lemon extract

Cream butter and add sugar. Add egg and beat thoroughly. Dissolve soda in cream and add to mixture. Add flour to make a dough which can be easily handled. Chill over night. When firm, slice into thin slices. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for 10 to 12 minutes.

Date Butterscotch Pudding.

(Serves 5-6)
2 cups brown sugar (light)
3 tablespoons cornstarch
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup cold water
1 cup boiling water
1 egg
3 tablespoons butter
½ cup dates (chopped)

Combine brown sugar, cornstarch, salt, and cold water. Add boiling water and cook until thickened, stirring constantly. Remove from range and pour over slightly beaten egg. Cook about a minute longer. Add butter and dates. Pour into sherbet glasses and chill before serving. Serve plain or garnished with whipped cream.

Cinnamon Apple Salad.

(Serves 5)
2 cups granulated sugar
2 teaspoons cinnamon
1½ cups water
Red vegetable coloring
5 medium sized apples (peeled and cored)
Bring sugar, cinnamon, and water to the boiling point and add sufficient vegetable coloring to tint mixture bright red color. Drop apples (peeled and cored) into boiling syrup and cook until apples are tender but firm. Remove and chill.

Serve on bed of water cress and fill core of apple with diced celery and chopped nuts. Serve with Roquefort dressing.

Scrambled Eggs and Mushrooms.

(Serves 5)
2 tablespoons butter
6 eggs (slightly beaten)
½ cup milk or mushroom liquor
1 cup canned mushrooms (sliced)
¾ teaspoon salt
Dash pepper

Heat butter in frying pan over low burner. Combine eggs, milk or mushroom liquor, sliced mushrooms and seasonings, and pour into frying pan. As mixture cooks, stir with a spatula, forming creamy flakes. Cook for about 5 minutes, or until eggs are firm but tender.

Bacon Baked Spaghetti.

(Serves 6-8)
½ package spaghetti
6 slices bacon
½ cup raw onion (cut fine)
2½ cups tomatoes
1 cup cheese (grated)
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper

Boil spaghetti until tender in boiling salted water. Drain. Cut bacon in small pieces and fry until light brown in color. Butter casserole, and place alternate layers of spaghetti, bacon, onion, tomatoes, and cheese in the casserole. Season each layer with salt and pepper, cover top layer with grated cheese and dot with butter. Bake approximately 30 minutes in a moderately slow oven (325 degrees).

THE SOLDIER OF FLUSHING BAY

("World Fair Site Proposed for Military Training Camp.")—Headline. Where Futurama drew the crowds. From Maine to Timbuctoo, That's where I'd train to battle for The old Red, White and Blue; The Trylon and the Perisphere Will do to mark the spot Where I got flat feet marching on An exposition lot.

Where General Motors stood I'll let My army life take root; By Railroads on Parade I'll fight And do it all on foot.

Where millions flocked on pleasure bent And marveled merrily I'll drill and drill for Uncle Sam— And think of Gypsy Lee!

Where "Streets of Paris" once held forth I'll master arts of war; (If they would only leave 'em there It won't be such a bore); Where crowds filed to the midway sights I'll drill on soldier grub; Baked beans and stew won't taste so bad Served near the "Terrace Club."

I'll learn to swing a rifle near The "Living Pictures" gay, And capture lovely models in My fancy twice a day;

I'll do guard duty many nights In weather vile or nice, Consoled by distant memories Of "Beauties Cased in Ice."

I'll stand maneuvers any time In wintry weather tough Upon the spot where dancers With soap bubbles did their stuff; In fancy I'll hear officers Cry "Ready for a raid!" We've orders for a state of siege Around the Aquacade!"

From Standard Brands to "Gas" and "Coke," From "Norway" to "The Coast," I'll learn to be a soldier boy Within this army post; Where stood the famous "Court of Peace" I'll learn the blitzkrieg way, And chase that ritzy Borden cow Right into Flushing bay.

Most training camps are dullish spots— There's little color found; A World's fair site should be a camp Where glamour doth abound.

All wars are dark and deadly things . . . Say, kid, do you suppose The next one could be any chance Be run by Billy Rose?

THE TRUTH SIMPLY TOLD
Today's popularity of Doan's Pills, after many years of world-wide use, surely must be accepted as evidence of satisfactory use. And favorable public opinion supports that of the able physicians who test the value of Doan's under exacting laboratory conditions. These physicians, too, approve every word of advertising you read, the objective of which is only to recommend Doan's Pills as a good diuretic treatment for disorder of the kidney function and for relief of the pain and worry it causes. If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove waste that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole body suffers when kidneys lag, and diuretic medication would be more often employed. Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warn of disturbed kidney function. You may suffer nagging back-ache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out. Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won world-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Ask your neighbor!
DOAN'S PILLS

BURKE OPENS CAMPAIGN

James E. Burke, in opening his campaign as the Republican candidate for re-election as State's Attorney, pledged himself "to continue the vigorous prosecution of crime that has marked the administration of my first term."

Citing the conviction of two farm murderers, the elimination of rural crime and the suppression of vice and gambling and the reputation Will County has gained for law and order, Burke said that his candidacy is based on a pledge to continue these policies in office.

"I come before the voters with my record before them, and this record, I am confident, shows that an earnest and capable State's Attorney can bring about such fine and splendid conditions as presently exist in this County."

Protected the Farmer

Mr. Burke specifically mentioned the protection he has afforded the farmer and his family. He stated that no farmer or his wife in this County, will ever forget the vigorous prosecution of John Jelliga, who perpetrated one of the most heinous offenses recorded in the criminal history of this County in murdering one of our farmers living in the eastern part of it. Both of the killers paid with their lives, one fearing the strenuous prosecution which he anticipated, took his own life and the other, after a successful prosecution of the case by Mr. Burke, paid the extreme penalty.

Mr. Burke also stated that he caused the extradition of James Williams from California and extracted from him a confession in which he related the circumstances under which he murdered Elsie Lichtenwalter. He, also knowing and fearing the type of prosecution he would receive, pleaded guilty in open Court. Mr. Burke stated that the Court did not heed his earnest recommendation and the defendant received 199 years imprisonment in the Illinois State Penitentiary where he will spend the rest of his life.

Mr. Burke further added that in complying with his pledge to the farmers to fully protect their families and property, he had the "F" men of this County approve the disposition of every criminal case committed against the farmer.

Next week we will give a resume of Mr. Burke's fight against the slot machine racket.
